The New Hampshire School Administrators Association is proud to announce Angel Littlefield, Director of Curriculum, Instruction, and Assessment at SAU 45 in Moultonborough, as its selection for the 2025 Outstanding Service Award.

The award is given to an outstanding New Hampshire school system leader who is not a Superintendent of Schools. The recognized individual works to improve district educational programs and/or services, contributes to workplace climate and high morale, anticipates emerging problems and acts to resolve them, and demonstrates professional growth and involvement.

SAU 45 Superintendent Patrick Andrew nominated Littlefield.

“Angel has a remarkable depth of knows about all things curricular,” Superintendent Andrew wrote. “She jumped into work here in SAU 45 leading our 'Portrait of a Learner' committee with great success. She has actively recruited input from the broader community and worked with a wide range of stakeholders in the process. She has also done a wonderful job addressing some of our shortfalls in math achievement by working closely with our teachers and math specialists.”

Littlefield taught English at Bow High School and served as an Academic Coordinator in the Laconia School District. She worked as Director of Curriculum in the Mascoma School District for three years, joining SAU 45 last July.

Littlefield is active in statewide education issues. She is a member of the NHSAA's Executive Board and chairs its Professional Development Committee. She also is a member of the Executive Board of the New Hampshire Excellence in Education program. In this role she chairs the High School of the Year selection committee, and co-chairs the annual EDies event that showcases the best of education statewide. She also collaborates with organizations like the New Hampshire Learning Initiative to better serve her learning communities.

Andrew's nomination was supported by many of Littlefield's professional colleagues.

“Angel is a strong instructional leader who organizes and facilitates high-quality professional development for teachers and paraprofessionals,” wrote Mascoma Superintendent Amanda Isabelle. “Angel has transformed the climate and culture of our faculty to eager and positive.”

“At the core of Angel's educational philosophy is a deep respect and belief in the worth of each individual, evident in everything from her high school teaching to her ongoing work with adults. She maintains high standards because she genuinely cares about preparing people for their future challenges,” wrote Jacqueline Coe, Superintendent of SAU 24.

Her nomination also was supported jointly by Christine Downing, Director of Curriculum, Instruction, and Assessment, SAUs 32, 75, and 100, and the 2024 awardee; Melissa Gray, Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum, Instruction, and Assessment, SAU 87; Owen Harrington, Director of Curriculum, Instruction, and Assessment, SAU 67; Karen DuBois, Director of Equity, Curriculum, Instruction, and Assessment, SAU 88; and Robin Steiner, Assistant Superintendent, SAU 70. They cited her ongoing mentorship of new curriculum directors, and ability to stay informed on ever-changing state education laws in their endorsement.

"Angel is always willing to spend time helping others navigate the complexities of curriculum development with confidence," they wrote. "Her collaborative spirit and commitment to fostering growth in others exemplify true leadership."

Littlefield will be recognized at the annual NHSAA conference in Whitefield in June.

"Angel's contributions and commitment to public education are truly noteworthy. She is an incredibly skilled, knowledgeable, caring, innovative, and selfless education leader who sincerely deserves recognition and praise," said Mark MacLean, NHSAA Executive Director. "Whether she is leading curriculum, instruction, and assessment initiatives within her district or collaborating with her colleagues throughout the state, Ms. Littlefield exemplifies class and professionalism. She is a true champion for all learners, educators, and leaders. We are fortunate to count Angel as one of our members. Congratulations to Ms. Littlefield, the 2025 NHSAA Outstanding Service Award winner."
